So who's really to blame if Mass is boring?

Father J. Ronald Knott

One should examine himself and so eat the bread and drink the cup. I Corinthians 11:28

For years, I have heard Catholics complain about priests, blaming us for boring homilies and dull Masses. I have joined in on occasion. These complaints motivate me to try hard to prepare stimulating homilies and to celebrate Mass with reverence—even when I'm not feeling well and even when I'm celebrating perhaps the fourth Mass of the weekend. I believe most of us do the best we can, even though responsibility for "boring Masses" has traditionally been pinned almost exclusively onto us priests.

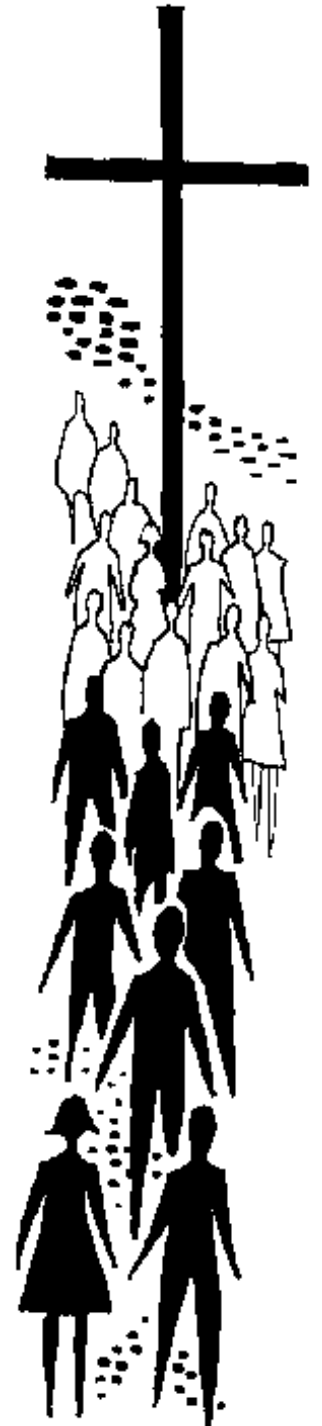

To be honest, sometimes these complaints make my blood pressure rise. Have you ever considered the fact that many of us priests go back to the sacristy shaking our heads over how boring the congregation was at certain Masses, especially when you do not sing, talk all during Mass, chew gum, run to the bathroom, arrive late and leave early?

A powerful religious experience at Sunday Mass requires skilled celebrants and full, active and conscious participation from congregations as well. Vatican II told us that, on the part of the priest, "more is required than a mere observance of the laws governing a valid and licit celebration." He must also "take care to cultivate an appropriate knowledge and facility in the liturgy." It says, as well, that "it is necessary that the faithful come to Mass with a proper disposition and that they cooperate with divine grace lest they receive it in vain."

What can you do when you want a powerful religious experience and your priest is less than inspirational? Instead of focusing on what your priest could do to energize you at the Mass, maybe you would have better success if you focused on what you could do to energize yourself and your priest. Energy can come from either side of the altar. You do not need to be a victim here.

Let me make two important suggestions as to what you can do to help yourself "get more out of Sunday Mass," regardless of the celebrant. The best thing you can do is to remind yourself over and over again, that Christ himself is present, even when things get tedious. When you find it hard to recognize Christ's presence in the priest, you can focus on Christ's presence in the scriptures proclaimed and in the congregation gathered. If all that fails, train your focus on Christ present in the action of the Mass itself or in the tabernacle where the Blessed Sacrament is reserved.

The next best thing to help yourself is to arrive early to find a good spot for hearing and seeing, to center yourself, to remind yourself of what you are about to do, and to go over the past week in your mind so as to remember what you came to give thanks for to begin with. Don't wait for others to make things better for you. Help yourself.

Full Active Participation

Full, active participation as described as the goal of the assembly by Vatican II means entering into the movement of the liturgy itself.

Liturgy wants to transform us into the image of God's Son. If we hold ourselves back, we hinder the action of God's grace within us. If we try to maintain our separation from our brothers and sisters, we resist God's efforts to form us into the one Body of Christ.

We need to come forward to sit with others, instead of taking a pew and sitting apart or, even worse, standing in the back as if ready to leave in a hurry. It is one step toward trying to enter into what is going on: not private prayer time, but the communal prayer of a worshipping assembly. If we were to attend a meal at a friend's house, we would join the family around the table. Coming together for Eucharist is coming together not for private prayer but to share together in a ritual meal with others whom we call members of one family.

If we enter into the action of the liturgy, then God can shape our minds and hearts according to the divine will. Then we will become effective instruments of God's will in our world. Empowered by God's grace, we who have been transformed can be used by God to transform our world.

That is the ultimate goal of the liturgical renewal—to transform the world for Christ. Liturgy leads to mission and those who share in Christ's sacrificial worship are led to share in his sacrificial life and love. Our dismissal challenges us: "Let those who share the meal, share also in the mission."

Thank You

The Worship Committee extends a sincere thank-you to all the liturgical ministers who participated in the Palm Sunday and Triduum liturgies.

All the sacristans, servers, lectors and coordinators who attended the rehearsals to better understand these complex liturgies

Everyone who participated in the foot-washing

The three representatives who carried the oils forward on Holy Thursday

Everyone who helped to carry the cross on Good Friday

Our faithful Art & Environment ministers who changed the décor of the church multiple times

The choirs, cantors and instrumentalists who enhanced the liturgies with sung prayer

The Hospitality Ministers and Super Greeters who were so good about greeting and passing out programs and palms.

The Communion Ministers, Cross Bearers, Candle Bearers and Gift Bearers who gave of their time to fulfill their ministries.

Sanctuary Attire

Summer is here and with the hot weather many people lower their dress standards—with an often unfortunate result in terms of appearance. Our church is fully air-conditioned and often uncomfortably cool. The Worship Committee will continue to enforce the rules of sanctuary attire. Sanctuary attire when serving as a liturgical minister would look like what you would wear when going out to dinner or the theatre for a special occasion. It is not what you would wear to a picnic or ball game. Even though it is difficult to define precise norms, liturgical ministers can ask what their clothing selection communicates. Does it project a sense of reverence? Is my attire "appropriate and dignified" and "befitting my role in the liturgy?"

To insure proper dress during the summer months, ministers arriving with less than acceptable sanctuary attire will be excused by either the captain of the communion ministers, the captain of the hospitality ministers or by the sacristan.

Please help insure that the dignity of our liturgy is preserved!
